Amendment 1

Proposal for a directive

Recital 3

Text proposed by the Commission

(3) Article 26a(1) of Directive 2006/43/EC requires Member States to ensure that statutory auditors and audit firms carry out the assurance of sustainability reporting in compliance with limited assurance standards to be adopted by the Commission. Article 26a(3) of that Directive requires the Commission to adopt those standards by 1 October 2026. Undertakings have raised concerns on the work carried out by the assurance providers and have expressed the need for flexibility in addressing specific risks and critical issues identified in the areas of sustainability assurance. To enable the Commission to take account of those concerns, it should be given more flexibility in adopting those standards. In any case, the Commission will issue targeted assurance guidelines by 2026 that clarify the necessary procedures that assurance providers are to perform as part of their limited assurance engagement before adopting the standards by delegated act.

Amendment

(3) Article 26a(1) of Directive 2006/43/EC requires Member States to ensure that statutory auditors and audit firms carry out the assurance of sustainability reporting in compliance with limited assurance standards to be adopted by the Commission. Article 26a(3) of that Directive requires the Commission to adopt those standards by 1 October 2026. Undertakings have raised concerns on the work carried out by the assurance providers and have expressed the need for flexibility in addressing specific risks and critical issues identified in the areas of sustainability assurance. The Commission should duly take into account those concerns when working on the limited assurance standards. That deadline of 1 October 2026 should be retained in order to ensure that undertakings know what to expect when it comes to sustainability assurance.

(6) A balance needs to be found between the objectives of data generation and reduction of administrative burden. Sustainability reporting, including the information referred to in Article 8 of Regulation (EU) 2020/852 of the European Parliament and of the Council⁹, of large undertakings with an average of more than 1000 employees during the financial year is indispensable to understand the transition to a climate-neutral economy. In the light of the balance to be found between the objectives of data generation and reduction of administrative burden, large undertakings within the new scope for sustainability reporting that have a net turnover not exceeding EUR 450 000 000 during the financial year should be able to disclose information referred to in Article 8

(7) Article 1(3) of Directive 2013/34/EU specifies that credit institutions and insurance undertakings that are large undertakings or small and medium-size undertakings – excluding micro-undertakings – with securities admitted to trading on an EU regulated market are subject to the sustainability reporting requirements set out in that Directive, regardless of their legal form. Considering that the scope of individual sustainability reporting should be reduced to large undertakings with an average of more than 1000 employees during the financial year, that reduction in scope should also apply to credit institutions and insurance undertakings.

(9) Article 19a(3) of Directive 2013/34/EU requires undertakings to report information about the undertaking's own operations and about its value chain. It is necessary to reduce the reporting burden for undertakings in the value chain that are not required to report on their sustainability. The reporting undertaking, for the purposes of reporting sustainability information at individual or at consolidated level, as required by Directive 2013/34/EU, and without prejudice to Union requirements to conduct a due diligence process, should therefore not seek to obtain from undertakings established in or outside of the Union in its value chain that have up to 1000 employees on average during the financial year any information that goes beyond the information specified in the standards for voluntary use by undertakings that are not required to report on their sustainability. The reporting undertaking should, however, be allowed to collect from such undertakings in its value chain any additional sustainability information that is commonly shared between undertakings in the sector concerned. Undertakings reporting on their value chain in accordance with those limitations should be deemed to comply with the obligation to report on their sustainability. the obligation on undertakings not to seek to obtain from undertakings in their value chain that have up to 1000 employees on average during the financial year any information that goes beyond the information specified in the standards for voluntary use by undertakings that are not required to report on their sustainability. For that purpose, the Commission should be empowered to adopt a delegated act to provide for sustainability reporting standards for voluntary use by undertakings that are not required to report on their sustainability. Those standards should be proportionate to, and relevant for, the capacities and the characteristics of those undertakings and to the scale and complexity of their activities. Those standards should also specify, where possible, the structure to be used to present that information.

the sector concerned. Where not all the necessary information regarding their chain of activities is available, or such information is incomplete or subject to legal limitations, the undertakings should be allowed, without any time limitation, to explain the efforts made to obtain the necessary information about their chain of activities, the reasons why that information could not be obtained, and their plans to obtain such information in the future. Undertakings reporting on their chain of activities in accordance with those limitations should be deemed to comply with the obligation to report on their sustainability. Assurance providers should prepare their assurance opinion respecting the obligation on undertakings not to seek to obtain from undertakings in their chain of activities that have up to 3000 employees and a net turnover of up to EUR 450 000 000 on average during the financial year any information that goes beyond the information specified in the standards for voluntary use by undertakings that are not required to report on their sustainability. For that purpose, the Commission should be empowered to adopt a delegated act to provide for sustainability reporting standards for voluntary use by undertakings that are not required to report on their sustainability. Those standards should be proportionate to, and relevant for, the capacities and the characteristics of those undertakings and to the scale and complexity of their activities. Those standards should also effectively contribute to the undertakings' compliance with their reporting obligations. Those standards should also specify, where possible, the structure to be used to present that information.

Amendment

(9a) Article 19a(2), point (a)(iii), and Article 29a(2), point (a)(iii), of Directive 2013/34/EU require undertakings and groups to include in their management reports and consolidated management reports, respectively, their climate transition plans. In order to avoid disproportionately burdensome requirements, on the one hand, but allow for transparency as regards the transition to a sustainable economy, on the other hand, undertakings should include in their management report information on any transition plans they have, if any.

This may be the case where the company concerned has received a complaint or is in the possession of information, for example through credible media or NGO reports, reports of recent incidents, or through recurring problems at certain locations about likely or actual harmful activities at the level of an indirect business partner. Where the company has such information, it should carry out an in-depth assessment. Companies should also carry out in-depth assessments with respect to adverse impacts arising beyond their direct business partner where the structure of this business relationship lacks economic rationale and suggests that it was chosen to remove an otherwise direct supplier with harmful activities from the purview of the company. Where the in-depth assessment confirms the likelihood or existence of the adverse impact, it should then be deemed to be identified. In addition, companies should seek to ensure that their code of conduct – which is part of their due diligence policy and sets out the expectations as to how to protect human, including labour, rights and the environment in business operations – is followed throughout the chain of activities in accordance with contractual cascading companies that have to comply with that obligation and ensure that their resources are used purposefully, the required due diligence should, as a general rule, be limited to the company's own operations, those of its subsidiaries and those of its direct business partners ('tier 1'). Consequently, when it comes to business relationships, while taking into account relevant risk factors, including company-level risk factors, such as whether the business partner is not a company covered by this Directive, business operation risk factors, geographic and contextual risk factors, such as the level of law enforcement with respect to the type of adverse impacts; product and service risk factors, and sectoral risk factors, companies should, after the scoping, be required to carry out further assessments of their own operations, those of their subsidiaries and, where related to their chains of activities, those of their direct business partners, in the areas where adverse impacts were identified to be most likely to occur and most severe. Companies should, however, look beyond their direct business relationships where they have plausible information that suggests an adverse impact at the level of an indirect business partner. Plausible information means information of an objective character, that is factual and verifiable and that allows the company to conclude that there is a reasonable likelihood that the information is true. This may be the case where the company concerned has received a complaint or is in the possession of information, for example through credible media or NGO reports, reports of recent incidents, or through recurring problems at certain locations about likely or actual harmful activities at the level of an indirect business partner. business partner where the structure of this business relationship lacks economic rationale and suggests that it was chosen to remove an otherwise direct supplier with harmful activities from the purview of the company. Where the further assessment confirms the likelihood or existence of the adverse impact, it should then be deemed to be identified.

Amendment 16

Proposal for a directive Recital 22

Text proposed by the Commission

(22) To limit the trickle-down effect on small and medium-sized undertakings and small midcap companies when it comes to mapping the value chain to identify adverse impacts, large companies should limit information requests to the information specified in the standards for voluntary use referred to in Article 29a of Directive (EU) 2013/34/EU, unless they need additional information to carry out the mapping and they cannot obtain that information in any other reasonable way.

Amendment

(22) To limit the trickle-down effect on small and medium-sized undertakings and small midcap companies when it comes to the scoping of the chain of activities to identify adverse impacts, companies within the scope should not seek to obtain information from their business partners but rely only on information that is already reasonably available such as publicly known information, information from searches and information gained through earlier cooperation. Entity-level information is not relevant at this stage, nor is any communication with business partners. It should only be possible to seek such information for further assessments under certain conditions. In such a case, it should be possible to seek information from direct business partners with fewer than 3000 employees that exceeds the information specified in the standards for voluntary use only where, following a risk-based approach, such information is necessary in light of indications of likely adverse impacts or because the standards do not cover relevant impacts and where such additional information cannot reasonably be obtained by other means, mainly from existing or secondary sources. The same should apply where companies are required to look beyond their direct business partners because they have plausible information suggesting an adverse impact at the level of an indirect business partner. In order to facilitate compliance for companies and the relevant business partners, it should be possible to obtain the necessary information either individually or collaboratively.

Amendment

(22a) While keeping with the objective of prioritising the most adverse and likely impacts, companies should be given significant flexibility in deciding which risks to address first on the basis of the severity and likelihood of an adverse impact. Such a decision should be based on the scale, scope or irremediable character of the adverse impact, taking into account the gravity of the impact. Once the most severe and likely adverse impacts are addressed in reasonable time, companies should address less severe and less likely adverse impacts. However, companies should not be penalised for any harm stemming from less significant adverse impacts that were not yet addressed according to the prioritisation in line with these principles.

(23) Companies may find themselves in situations where their production heavily relies on inputs from one or several specific suppliers. At the same time, where the business operations of such a supplier are linked to severe adverse impacts, including child labour or significant environmental harm, and the company has unsuccessfully exhausted all due diligence measures to address those impacts, the company, as a last resort should suspend the business relationship while continuing to work with the supplier towards a solution, where possible using any increased leverage resulting from the suspension.

(23) Companies may find themselves in situations where their production heavily relies on inputs from one or several specific suppliers. At the same time, where the business operations of such a supplier are linked to severe adverse impacts, including child labour or significant environmental harm, and the company has unsuccessfully exhausted all due diligence measures to address those impacts, the company, as a last resort should suspend the business relationship while continuing to work with the supplier towards a solution, where possible using any increased leverage resulting from the suspension. Such a suspension should not lead to a substantial prejudice for the company, including where crucial business partners provide raw materials, products or services which are essential to the company's business. Substantial prejudice should be interpreted as a negative and significant effect on the company's legal, financial or economic situation or its production capacity, including in the long term, such as an effect giving rise to the likelihood of insolvency. In order not to undermine the aims of this Directive, the decision not to suspend the business relationship should be subject to conditions, including reporting to the competent supervisory authority about the duly justified reasons for such a decision. Companies should also assess if the adverse impacts from suspension can be reasonably expected to be manifestly more severe than the adverse impact that could not be prevented or adequately mitigated. Should that be the case, the company should not be required to suspend the business relationship and should be in a position to report to the competent supervisory authority about the duly justified reasons for such a decision.

Amendment

Prior to suspending a business relationship, the company shall assess whether such a suspension would cause substantial prejudice to the company or whether the adverse impacts from doing so can be reasonably expected to be manifestly more severe than the adverse impact that could not be brought to an end or the extent of which could not be adequately minimised. Should that be the case, the company shall not be required to suspend the business relationship and shall be in a position to report to the competent supervisory authority about the duly justified reasons for such decision.

Digital solutions

1. The Commission shall establish a dedicated digital reporting portal serving as a one-stop-shop for companies. The portal shall provide free access to all templates and information relating to all reporting requirements imposed on companies in Union law, tailored to a company's size, sector, products and services, and risk exposure. It shall also provide access to information on funding and tendering opportunities to help companies implement, comply with and benefit from their due diligence obligations.

For the purposes of the first subparagraph, the Commission shall ensure that the relevant data platforms providing information to companies and data users are interoperable and that data can be transmitted, exchanged and analysed in a technically seamless manner.

2. The Commission shall submit a report to the European Parliament and the Council by ... [24 months after the entry into force of this Directive] on the need to provide for technological solutions, including the use of trustworthy

artificial intelligence in accordance with Regulation (EU) 2024/1689.
